Landing goods is perilous

By Drew Pearson

DA NANG—Sgt. Jamon Milonas' instructions were terse. "We'll be on the ground at Khe Sanh less than two minutes," he said. "As soon as the cargo is dumped, pile out of the plane and run like hell for the nearest bunker."

Our C-123 assault transport was loaded with anti-tank ammo for beleaguered Khe Sanh, which the North Vietnamese hope to turn into an American Dien Bien Phu.

The ammunition was packed in boxes, which were lashed to a roller bed. After we hit the runway at Khe Sanh, the rear ramp would be lowered, and the load would roll out the tail as we taxied down the field. The deplaning passengers were supposed to follow after the cargo on the double.

The reason for the haste was that communist mortars, artillery and rockets were zeroed in on the air strip. As long as our giant transport plane remained on the strip it would be a dead duck in a communist shooting gallery.

The record turn-around for unloading a plane at Khe Sanh, however, stayed on the ground longer than two minutes. Even that was long enough for most planes to pick up shrapnel. Two had even been destroyed on the runway.

The rain forests on the lower slopes around Khe Sanh are teeming with North Vietnamese. The exact strength and location are hidden beneath a canopy of dense green foliage. Weeks ago they overran the small village of Khe Sanh. But the Marines still hold the highlands.

Their main bastion forms an irregular rectangle about one mile long and half a mile wide on a shell-pecked plateau. The Marines also occupy the mountaintops—hills 861, 881, and 950—looking down on the plateau.

Seawall next street problem

About two months ago it looked as though repairing the seawall was right around the corner. At least, the county was ready to advertise for bids. The thought, Uncle Sam had his $100,000 ready and the bond protection fund was supposed to have $279,853.47 from which to pay up the balance of $262,925 of the estimated $362,925.

Then it was discovered the preceding figure of supervisors, when four of the five present (one was not in office, had a leave of absence and transfered) of $95,360.96 from the last year's bond fund which had not been repaid. In the interim, the figures given the Echo were: Bond fund, $19,800; seawall fund, $24,200.96; $7,000 and $3,000; bond and interest, $2,000; mosquito control, $8,500; and Bond, $5,000. As of yesterday these were the last figures the county auditor had.

It is obvious the supervisors in the interim received. Nevertheless, it falls to the supervisors to hurry up and find something to do. The county can put up its share for this construction. Further delay may require the receipt of $160,000 in federal funds. Hancock County is already way past the usual deadline for repairs to Hurricane Betsy's damage. Under the law, repairs were supposed to be undertaken within one year of the hurricane or by September 1, 1966. An exception was made for Hancock County, but with federal funds being increasingly in short supply this exception could be terminated.

A Conservative View

by James J. Kilpatrick

THE JURY'S PITCH THE testimony of the witness, and consider the questions. Did Looftart look as though he'd kill his wife? Did his wife look as though she ought to be killed? It takes time to win to the jury.

Sooner or later at least no real trial lawyer—over has suggested that the jury system is perfect. It is the best system that has been devised. The common-sense surprise is that the influences, apart from the evidence in court, have an effect upon a vote of innocence or guilt. The demeanor of the lawyer, the tone of a judge's voice—these play a part. The whole system of peremptory challenges to the veniremen rests upon recognition of human prejudices that have nothing to do with newspaper coverage.

There is more to it than that. The criminal trial is almost never a pursuit of pure truth. It is an adversary proceeding, brought in the name of the state against a certain defendant. The prosecution has its bag of tricks, and the defense has its. The path to a verdict is booby-trapped with technical rules and constitutional pitfalls. A major Costs quoted by John Scaffie, chairman of an committee on the matter, were $3,000 for 2,500 copies and $3,700 for 5,000 copies. This works out to about 2 cents per copy. Bill said the folder was urgently needed as he is contacting industry without any visual aids to give them.

 The successful bidder would be required to build the dykes from local materials. At the north end of the project these seem to be of a heavier nature with clay and sand. To the south, where the washout occurred, dyke construction material seems mostly to consist of marshy type soils and grass. To overcome apparent ineffectiveness in holding power of this south area material, it has been suggested that some type of dyke construction,

Can Khe Sanh be held?

These heights dominate one of the main infiltration routes into South Vietnam. The Marines, more accustomed to assault than defense, have been ordered to cling to the high ground. Anxious, the joint chiefs in Washington have asked Gen. William Westmoreland in Saigon whether he can hold the Khe Sanh bastion against the massive North Vietnamese. The Pentagon brass have suggested it might be better to pull back, thus upsetting meticulously rigid enemy planning that is characteristic of the North Vietnamese.

Westmoreland assured the Joint Chiefs that he welcomed a showdown with Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, the conqueror of Dien Bien Phu, now the enemy commander at Khe Sanh.

Marine officers told me that any defensive position, including Khe Sanh, can be overrun—if enough manpower and firepower are thrown into the battle. However, they promised that the Marines would make the North Vietnamese pay terribly for every foot of ground they take.

Meanwhile, our plane was winging toward the airstrip which has become the lifeline of Khe Sanh. Inside our cavernous C-123 the shriek of the twin motors was deafening. Communication was restricted to lip reading and pantomime.

As we neared the mountain stronghold, the grizzled Milonas offered almost inaudible advice about the bunkers where we were to seek shelter. He couldn't give their exact location. As load master, he had always been too occupied disgorging the cargo to take inventory of the human shelters. If the mortar rounds started falling too fast and close, however, he suggested the most convenient refuge might be a drainage pipe alongside the airstrip.

Dense fog

Sgt. John Evans, the crew chief, finally signalled that we were over Khe Sanh. I strained for a glimpse, but the ground was blotted out by a thick, white cloud bank.

Evans swooped his hand in a downward glide to indicate that we were descending. I buckled up my steel-plated flak jacket and clamped on the heavy steel helmet. But no opening appeared in the white vapor that had swallowed us.

Evans rotated his finger in the air. We would circle for awhile. For nearly two hours, we circled over the Khe Sanh, watching for a break in the fog. Once we spotted dangerously near the mountaintop level. But Evans formed a circle with his thumb and forefinger—it was ceiling zero.

At last the aircraft commander, Capt. Carvel Hartley, a heavy, book-nosed man, reached for a carboard computer. He twirled the dials and concluded that the gas was running low. Back to Da Nang we flew.

The weather forecast for Khe Sanh was heavy overcast for the next three days. It was the kind of weather the enemy likes.

Vietnam vignettes

Cpl. Harry Johnson of East Jacksonville, Fla., has hit upon a unique scheme for defusing Viet Cong booby traps around the Quang Tri Marine Base. He has offered the local Vietnamese boys a trade of C-rations for explosives. Result: They have rustled up explosives that the Viet Cong had planted or intended to plant. South Korean Marines, who have turned out to be some of the toughest fighters in Vietnam, are having trouble getting air and artillery support. Radio operators and helicopter pilots were suspicious of the oriental accent of the South Koreans. They feared Viet Cong agents trying to spring a trap. To solve the problem, the Korean and U.S. Marines here have set up gun-fire liaison companies. Americans with acceptable accents now accompany the Koreans into action. The press camp at Da Nang was on red alert during my second night there. Intelligence agents had picked up a report that the Viet Cong were planning an attack in the vicinity of the press camp. The only attack came from mosquitoes. My biggest surprise has been the weather. Here in monsoon country it is cool during the day and nippy at night. I had thought South Vietnam was always steaming hot.

State chambers favor eight laws

Starting in August and ending in October the Mississippi Economic Council submitted eight propositions to its affiliated local Chambers of Commerce on which the latter were asked to express an opinion For or Against. Sixty-seven local chambers answered and last week MEC released results which are repeated below, the numbers indicate how many For, Against or have no opinion.

County Redistricting 39 - 3 - 10
 Appointed State Supt. of Education 34 - 8 - 10
 Appointed Lay State Board of Education 35 - 4 - 10
 Equitable Tax Assessments 32 - 5 - 10
 County Unit System of Road Administration 31 - 3 - 10
 Sheriff - Tax Collector Separation Succession 60 - 0 - 4
 Legislative Research Commission 41 - 1 - 1
 Lower Court (Justice of the Peace) Reform 15 - 6 - 6

Since most of these issues will be brought to the present legislature in one form or another, we suggest to our readers that they discuss these matters with our three legislators, State Sen. Martin Smith, and Reps. Walter James Phillips and Lonnie Smith. Incidentally, we omit with the majority of the local boards on all these items.

It WAS pretty

Our readers write

Editor, Sea Coast Echo:
 In the issue two years ago I lived in Bay St. Louis. We heard a number of people say "It WAS pretty town". It still is very charming and with a little effort it can be made so again.

Thank you, Mr. Glass, for giving us the matter of a "beach" for our town in the Sea Coast Echo. Keep reminding all of us that it might get better.

Sincerely,
 ANDREW D. RYAN

Editors of the Echo are very welcome to any and all suggestions, and they should be put into print. I have a taste and am limited to 300 words. The Sea Coast Echo is a very nice paper and each letter is properly signed by the writer before it will be considered for publication. Letters without a name or address will not be published.

Report from Jackson

By Rep. Walter Phillips
 The legislature entered its last week of the current session with still only a small number of bills of a more or less uncontroversial nature on the calendar.

The most spirited debate occurring in the House during the week concerned the contribution by municipalities to the road stamp program. The issue involved whether or not municipalities should be allowed to contribute support to the county in behalf of the program. Most of the debate was centered around the merits of the road stamp program, rather than the issue of the bill. This bill was passed with a substantial majority.

The legislature again appeared to have banker's hours, but in reality has been busy with continuous committee meetings in an effort to perfect the bills which would enable the improved school program to be financed. As a member of separate sub-committees studying the sales tax bills and the income tax bills, I can report that floor action is anticipated during the week of March 11. Substantial agreement has been reached in committee on the income tax bill as to the mechanics of the bill, the form of administration, and the legal approach, however there is still some question as to the rates involved. It is anticipated that careful consideration should be given to perfecting a bill which would return a sufficient amount of revenue to substantially aid in the financing of the school program, at the same time imposing rates of taxation which would be commensurate with the continued economic and industrial growth of the state. Information is being sought at this time from the Research and Development Center as to the rates of industrial growth of our several sister Southern states with which we are in direct competition for industry, so that we might make a determination as to that applicable rates could be imposed without a crippling of our industrial progress.

The income tax bill is deemed by many to be the real key to the financing of the teacher pay raises, and it is anticipated that a great deal of support this bill will be given by the various teacher groups throughout the state.

By Rep. Lonnie Smith
 The House of Representatives engaged in very little floor action last week. Again most of the work was concentrated in intensive study of bills in the major committees. The Ways and Means Committee has been working diligently through sub-committees to prepare the expanded educational program and other additional appropriations anticipated for the next biennium. All reports from this committee indicated that a revision upward of the income tax and an added one-half cent sales tax will be recommended in bills to be presented to the full House in the next few days.

Two controversial measures which have provoked much interest from certain quarters are still awaiting committee action. The Mississippi Economic Council's proposal for a mandatory county-unit system for roadbuilding has been assigned to a sub-committee of the House Highway and Transportation Committee. There has been a great deal of discussion about this measure when, if ever, it will be considered in the House.

Another bill which has aroused sentiment both pro and con would abolish the Mississippi Milk Commission. The Agriculture Committee is holding up any action on the proposal. Other bills which have been introduced would abolish the commission and transfer its powers to the commissioner of agriculture.

The power of committees to put bills to final rest for the duration of the session was demonstrated last week. A measure to bring Mississippi Time was killed in committee. The House during the 1966 session devoted several days of floor debate to a similar bill. The unfavorable reaction of the Judiciary Committee to the matter will in all likelihood prevent it from reaching the floor in any form.

Nothing has as yet been projected about the state's highway program during the coming two years. The governor has remained aloof about any definite proposals. The highway commission and legislative leaders in the highway field in both houses have been in conference and are reaching long range plans are expected shortly.

By Sen. Martin Smith
 Several weeks ago I reported to you that a resolution had been introduced which would set in motion the procedures necessary to reduce the state residency requirement for voters from two years to one. The resolution would have also reduced the residency requirement in an election district or precinct from one year to six months. This resolution, which had been previously passed by the House, was amended by the Senate last week and then passed by a vote of 19 to 9, receiving more than the two-thirds vote necessary for passage. The Senate amendment reinstated the one-year district residency requirement rather than the six months provision. The resolution will now be sent back to the House of Representatives for consideration and action.

Another matter previously passed by the House pertaining to elections is now on the Senate calendar. This bill would change the number of county election commissioners from three to five and provide for their election, rather than appointment. Presently, the State Election Commission—composed of the Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney General—appoints three persons from each county to serve their respective counties. Under the pending bill, one county election commissioner would be elected from each supervisor's base, with all the qualified electors of the county voting on each commissioner. There is now legislation pending in the federal courts attacking the present law by which county commissioners are appointed.

If this bill becomes law, then the county commissioners will be voted upon in the November general election this year. The present commissioners would continue to hold office through August 31, 1968. Thereafter, until the elected commissioners take office on the first Monday of January, 1969, the board of supervisors of each county would carry out such duties. Under this bill, in order for a candidate to qualify, he must file a petition signed by not less than 100 qualified electors requesting that he be a candidate. This petition must also be filed not less than 30 days before the election. Of course, the bill may be amended by the Senate before final passage.
